4 MOTHERS, 10 CHILDREN.

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. "There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and positively effective. Physicians prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and Children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"I certify that little Robbie Hale, of 466 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a thin, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken 13 bottles; is perfectly well; weighed 30 pounds the day he was 7 months old, and when this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known." FANNIE MULLIN, Professional Nurse. 466 Portland Ave., St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 4, 1887.

"This is a picture of my twins, Charlie and William. It was taken when they were 8 months old. They weigh 16 pounds each. I am indebted to Castoria for their uniform good health." MRS. HERMINE SCHULES. 1629 Lexington Ave., New York, May 23rd, 1887.

"I enclose you photographs of my 'triplets' 2 boys and 1 girl—Maggie, Pete and Willie. I owe their health and strength to Castoria. It was through my neighbors' urgent appeals that I commenced its use, as both my boys were thin and inclined to be sickly. At present they are fat and hearty, they weigh 8, 8½ and 9½ pounds, and are 2 months and 3 days old." MRS. MARY KLINGER. 736 Cortland Ave., New York, May 23rd, 1887.

"I enclose you photograph of my quartette, 4 girls. They are now 2 weeks old. The smallest weighs 5 pounds, the others 8 pounds each. My other children have all gained health and strength from the use of Castoria, and I have already commenced giving it to my four little darlings." MRS. ANNA DE GROOTE, Milbury, Mass., Nov., 15, 1888. au1-wlt-dw

LABOR TROUBLES.

A STRIKE IMMINENT AMONG RAILWAY MEN.

The Knights of Labor Having Trouble With the Railway Companies—Supt. Porter Says There Are 64,000,000 People in the United States.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The trouble between the Knights of Labor and the New York Central Railway Company is hourly becoming more serious. J. J. Holland, member of the executive board of labor made three different attempts this morning to have a conference with Vice-President Webb of the railway company for the purpose of effecting a peaceful solution of the difficulty. Mr. Webb refused to talk with him, and motioned him out of his office. Mr. Holland then talked the matter over with Supt. Toucey and asked for the reinstatement of discharged men, and said that the Knights were anxious to have the company make a special investigation in each case so that the truth would be known. He warned Mr. Toucey that he (Toucey) and Mr. Webb would be held responsible for a strike if one was ordered. Mr. Toucy then made several attempts to prevail upon Webb to see Holland, but the former remained obdurate. A meeting of the district committee will be held at the Grand Union Hotel at 5 o'clock, when further developments are expected. Grand Master Workman Powderly and Secretary Hayes of the Knights are ready to be called if their presence is desired. An impression is growing among the employees of the road that a war upon the Knights was decided upon some time ago, and that Mr. Depew, being opposed to it, went to Europe, so as to be absent when the discharges occurred.

More Trouble Ahead.

ALBANY, N.Y., Aug. 8.—The Central Hudson employees are indignant at the unsatisfactory treatment of the Knights of Labor committee at New York. The New York general executive board are at the Delavan hotel and notified the Central Hudson authorities that they will receive any explanation offered for dismissal of men. It is generally believed that an order will be issued this afternoon for a tie-up between New York and Buffalo.

She Whipped Him.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 8.—Because his wife whipped him, Edward Klink, public inspector of lights in this city, has filed a suit for divorce. The cause of the alleged whipping is not stated, but he says that a horsewhip was used, and that he preferred to suffer humility and disgrace rather than strike back his own wife. He informed her that he could not live in peace and she had lost her affection for him. The petition filed this morning is not for absolute divorce, but only divorce from bed and board. It is probably the first suit of the kind ever entered in the court here by any man.

An Unfortunate Old Man.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—A special to the Herald from Reading, Pa., says: John Steinel, 65 years of age, about six months ago went to New York to sail for Germany and two days later returned saying he had been robbed of his money in Battery park. Three months later he went to New York and was robbed in the Bowery of his money and his trunk. A few days ago he left home with $600, planning as usual to visit relatives in Germany, and to-day returned to Reading minus his trunk, which was taken from him somewhere in New York but where, the old man is unable to say. His wife then determined to stop all further European trips of that kind, and appearing before Ald. Brownwell, she had a warrant issued for his arrest on a charge of abandonment and non-support, and he was required to give bail to the court, which his surety thinks will keep the old man in this country till after the European season closes.

Sad Drowning Accident.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Mollie Storm, wife of W. Storm, clerk in the tax department at the City Hall, and Edith his daughter, Mrs. J. R. Johnson, wife of the secretary of the Viaduct Manufacturing Co., and Carroll, son of J. S. Graham, clerk at the Spring Grove Asylum, were drowned yesterday afternoon in Stingoies creek, St. Mary's Co., while bathing. The bodies were recovered by oystermen in the vicinity and brought to Baltimore this morning. The party with the exception of Mrs. Graham went bathing at a point considered dangerous because of the tides. The steamer Sue came along and the under tow from the steamer caught the women and children and swept them beyond the depth. The captain of the Sue started his vessel towards the bathers, but before he reached them some oystermen rescued nine of the party. Mrs. Johnson and Edith Storm lost their lives in their heroic efforts to save Mrs. Storm and Carroll Graham. Mrs. Stevens was insensible when recovered but was resuscitated.

General Grant's Remains.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The Senate this morning passed concurrent resolutions, introduced by Senator Plum a few days ago, expressing the desire of Congress for the removal of the remains of General Grant from Riverside Park to National Arlington Cemetery.

Not Satisfied.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 8.—The property of Andrew H. Hammond, organ reed manufacturer, was attached this morning by Chas. P. Fisher, a heavy stockholder in the Monroe Organ Reed Company, of which Hammond owns a controlling interest and is general manager. The bill in equity filed by plaintiff's counsel yesterday, alleges Hammond mismanaged the affairs of the company, and asks that a receiver be appointed.

Pretty Good Pay.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug 8.—John L. Sullivan and Peter Jackson, have been offered a purse of $50,000. $25,000 to winner and $5,000 to loser, to finish a fight at Carnival Palace, in Ogden, Utah.

Sixty-four Million People.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 8.—Superintendent Porter to-night made an estimate of the total population of the United States, placing it in round numbers at 64,000,000. Under the system employed at the census bureau a double count is made, each name being counted twice. At the close of the work to-night the total count was 88,000,000, or, divided by two, 44,000,000 inhabitants. About one-third of the work under the estimate is yet to be done. The count is going on the rate of about 4,500,000 a day, and the superintendent believes he will be able to give the official figures by September 1.

Canadian Pacific Competition.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 6.—Secretary Windom sent to-day to the Senate a letter in answer to the resolution calling on him for information regarding the shipment in bond of merchandise between Atlantic and Pacific ports over Canadian railways. The secretary says that merchandise in bond, appraised and unappraised, and goods of domestic origin, are forwarded over these railroads under bond, and, on the arrival of such bonds at Vancouver, transhipment is made under the supervision of United States officers, who certify the facts upon the manifesto.

The secretary quotes the authority under which such transportation is permitted, and expresses the opinion that, as under the regulations of the department American vessels only are allowed to be employed in transporting goods, the laws of the coasting trade are not violated. He further says he has no knowledge that the Grand Trunk railroad has violated the revenue or coasting laws of the United States in transporting merchandise between places in the United States.

Printers' Strike.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—All the union printers employed on the four daily papers of this city went on strike late this afternoon. Some days ago the proprietors of the four dailies united in a request for the reduction of the scale from 50 cents per thousand to 40 cents. The union declined to accede to this, and in turn put in a formal demand that the proprietors sign a contract by noon to-day to maintain the rates at 50 cents for one year. This the proprietors promptly refused, and the strike followed this afternoon.

This evening the proprietors gathered together as many non-union printers as they could find, and the papers will come out in the morning.

SCHWEINFURTH'S "HEAVEN."

Does Not Accord With the Christian Ideas of That Place.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—A special to the Herald from Rockford, Illinois, says: People of this city are worked up to a high pitch of indignation over sermons made recently at the "Heaven Farm" near this city, where George Schweinfurth alleged Christ and his "angles" hold forth, by the fact that two children have been born there of late, of which Schweinfurth is the reported father, has aroused the Christian part of the community, which now demands that the free love community be driven out. Rev. Mr. Conde, one of the leading clergymen of this city, issued a card taking strong grounds against allowing Schweinfurth's "Heaven" to exist, and calling upon the Knight Templars of the northern district of Illinois, who meet here in conclave next week, to preserve the honor of their fair name by assisting to root out the evil. There is much talk of organizing Whitecaps and going to "Heaven" for purpose of tarring and feathering the "Savior." Schweinfurth evidently fears something of this sort, and to-day caused a circular to be issued setting forth the creed and tenets of his faith, the principal feature of which is that it enables men and women to lead absolutely pure lives. He says there is no marrying or giving in marriage by the church, and that so strict is the discipline and so great the self denial among the men that they lost all desires of the flesh. Prosecuting Attorney Works says he cannot do anything in the premises, but the probabilities are that citizens will take hold of the matter and make it so unpleasant for Schweinfurth that he will be compelled to leave.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

A Young Colored Man Passes as a Returned Prodigal and Subsides.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Sun's Columbus, Ga., special says: Three years ago Andrew Youngblood, a colored youth 17 years old, living with his widowed mother in Calleton Co., suddenly disappeared. In November last his grief-stricken mother heard that her wayward son was not far away. She at once went in search of him and brought him to her home, lavishing on him a mother's love and care. Although his features and color were identical with the missing Andrew Youngblood, the missing son, neighbors doubted his identity because he did not seem to recognize old acquaintances, but he allayed all suspicions by saying he had only pretended not to know them. Soon after his return home his mother told him his old sweetheart was still single and that she thought it was his duty to marry her, so taking the advice of his mother he sought the hand of the dusky damsel and they were married, and seemed to live happily till July 5th, when the young man went down to Eddie's slough and committed suicide by drowning. This, however, did not end the case of Andrew Youngblood, for on July 24th the real missing boy put in his appearance. He was recognized by all of his neighbors and those he was acquainted with before he went away. He was very rigidly examined, and gave satisfactory proof that he was Andrew Youngblood whom all supposed to be dead. His mother's tears were turned into joy; but the young widow still mourns, as she cannot claim him as her husband. She simply married the wrong man.

LEGAL AMENDMENTS.

Changes Suggested in United States Law Courts—Right of Appeal, Etc.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Mr. Edmunds, from the Judiciary Committee reported to the Senate an amendment in the shape of a substitute to the bill reported by Ewarts from the majority of the committee a few days ago, to enlarge and make the circuit courts of the United States courts of appeal, and to limit the jurisdiction of the United States supreme court in some directions. A substitute was reported by the minority to-day which proposes to make any three judges of the United States supreme court constitute a quorum to hear and try cases and render decision. It also provides that a separate division of the court may direct before the full court on matters before them which involve questions of unusual difficulty or important causes pending and which may hereafter be pending in the United States Supreme Court, in which are involved questions arising under the constitution of the United States are to be heard before the full court. Accompanying the substitute is the report of the minority signed by Senators Edmunds, Ingalls and Vest, in which, while criticizing the provisions of the majority bill they question the wisdom of excluding from review by the United States Supreme Court all cases brought by citizens of different States, aliens, etc. The constitution, they say, puts suits of that character on the same footing as suits drawing on the question of the constitution of the United States. Every suit in the courts of the United States should have an equal right to take the judgment of a higher court of the union upon a particular case, be it great or small, leaving the final decision in nine different courts of appeal as proposed by the majority. The minority think this would produce results quite different from, and out of harmony with each other and make a still greater accumulation of undisposed cases in some circuits; and while it might relieve the United States Supreme Court, it would by that much diminish the speedy dispatch in court of relieving a blockade in one quarter by enlarging it in many others. The minority, "with greatest respect for majority," submit a scheme which they believe will enable the United States Supreme Court to keep fully up with its calendar, and at the same time not delay the administration of justice in the different circuit courts of the United States.

A DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.

How a Deserted Turkish Maiden was Treated by Russians.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News tells the following pretty story of a "daughter of the regiment." During the Russo-Turkish war a private in the Kexholm regiment when in Bulgaria found a little Turkish girl about four years old who had been abandoned by her father and mother. The soldier took the little one to his officers, who resolved to adopt it. The child, who was suffering from want of food, soon recovered, and told her protectors that her name was Aish. As soon as peace had been signed and the Russians were allowed to enter Constantinople the colonel bought a quantity of dresses for "the young lady," and "a hat with a real garden of flowers upon it." When the regiment returned to Warsaw the officers resolved to do their best for the girl. They imposed upon themselves an income tax of one per cent. and resolved to pay to the "Aish fund" ten copecks of each game of cards used at the regimental club, etc. Aish, who meanwhile had been christened under the name of Maria Kexholmskaia, was then placed at the Maria College for young girls at Warsaw.

Twelve years have past and Maria Kexholmskaia has become a pretty girl, and has just finished her college studies. The regiment gave a fete in her honour a few days ago; then a state dinner, during which the eldest non-commissioned officer of the regiment, in the name of all the privates, presented a holy image, and in the evening there was a ball. As a sign of her gratitude, Maria Kexholmskaia presented the regiment with a large velvet cushion, on which she had embroidered in gold the monogram of the regiment and exact copies of all the decorations and medals the regiment has received for its gallantry. In one of the corners she had embroidered "Masha (or Maria) Kexholmskaia, 24th January, 1878—19th June, 1890." The Emperor of Austria is the chief of the regiment, and it is supposed that he will do something to show his interest in the daughter of his regiment, who is now staying with General Panjoutin, commander of the 11 Division, the officer who commanded the Kexholm Regiment when little Aish was found.

"No one, sir. It is being used as a tailors' shop; half a dozen of the company tailors work there; but I can send them back to their own barracks. The house is in good repair, and, as Mr. Hayne says, exactly like those built for officers' use."

"And you mean you want to live there alone, Mr. Hayne?"

"I do, sir, exactly."

The colonel turned sharply to the desk once more. The strained silence continued a moment. Then he faced his officers.

"Mr. Hayne, will you remain a few moments? I wish to speak with you. Gentlemen, that is all this morning." And so the meeting adjourned.

While many of the cavalry officers strolled into the neighboring club and reading room, it was noticed that their comrades of the infantry lost no time at intermediate points, but took the shortest road to the row of brown cottages known as the officers' quarters. The feeling of constraint that had settled upon all was still apparent in the group that entered the club room, and for a moment no one spoke. There was a general settling into easy chairs, and picking up of newspapers without reference to age or date. No one seemed to want to say anything, and yet every one felt it necessary to have some apparent excuse for becoming absorbed in other matters. This was so evident to Lieut. Blake that he speedily burst into a laugh—the first that had been heard—and when two or three heads popped out from behind their printed screens to inquire into the cause of his mirth, that light hearted gentleman was seen sprawling his long legs apart and gazing out of the window after the groups of infantrymen.

"What do you see that's so intensely funny?" growled one of the elders among the dragoons.

"Nothing, old mole—nothing," said Blake, turning suddenly about. "It looks too much like a funeral procession for fun. What I'm chuckling at is the absurdity of our coming in here like so many mutes in weepers. It's none of our funeral."

"Strikes me the situation is damned awkward," growled "the mole," again.

"Here's a fellow comes in who's cut by his regiment, and has placed ours under lasting obligations before he gets inside the post."

"Well, does any man here know the rights and wrongs of the case, anyhow?" said a tall, bearded captain, as he threw aside the paper which he had not been reading, and rose impatiently to his feet. "It seems to me from the little I've heard of Mr. Hayne and the little I've seen, that there is a broad variation between facts and appearances. He looks like a gentleman."

"No one does know anything more of the matter than was known at the time of the court martial five years ago," answered "the mole." "Of course you have heard all about that, and my experience is that when a body of officers and gentlemen find, after due deliberation on the evidence, that another has been guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, the chances are a hundred to one he has been doing something disreputable, to say the least."

"Then why wasn't he dismissed?" queried a young lieutenant. "The law says he must be."

"That's right, Dolly; pull your Ives and Benet on 'em and show you know all about military law and courts martial," said the captain, crushingly. "It's one thing for a court to sentence, and another for the president to approve. Hayne was dismissed, so far as a court could do it, but the president remitted the whole thing."

"There was more to it than that, though, and you know it, Buxton," said Blake. "Neither the department commander nor Gen. Sherman thought the evidence conclusive, and they said so, especially old Gray Fox. And you ask any of these fellows here now whether they believe Hayne was really guilty, and I'll bet you that eight out of ten will flunk at the question."

"And yet they all cut him dead. That's prima facie evidence of what they think."

"Cut be blowed! By Gad, if any man asked me to testify on oath as to where the cut lay, I should say he had cut them. Did you see how he ignored Foster and Graham this morning?"

"I did, and I thought it damned ungentlemanly in him. Those fellows did the proper thing, and he ought to have acknowledged it," broke in a third officer.

"I'm not defending that point; the Lord knows he has done nothing to encourage civility with his own people; but there are two sides to every story, and I asked their adjutant last fall, when there was some talk of his company's being sent here, what Hayne's status was, and he told me. There isn't a squarer man or sounder soldier in the army than the adjutant of the Riflers; and he said that it was Hayne's stubborn pride that more than anything else stood in the way of his restoration to social standing. He had made it a rule that every one who was not for him was against him, and refused to admit any man to his society who would not first come to him of his own volition, and he believed him utterly innocent. As that involved the necessity of their looking upon Rayner as either perjured or grossly and persistently mistaken, no one felt called upon to do it. Guilty or innocent, he has lived the life of a Pariah ever since."

"I wanted to open out to him, to-day," said Capt. Gregg, "but the moment I began to speak of his great kindness to our men he froze as stiff as Mulligan's ear. What was the use? I simply couldn't thaw an icicle. What made him so effective in getting the frost out of them was his capacity for absorbing it into his own system."

"Well, here, gentlemen," said Buxton, impatiently, "we've got to face this thing sooner or later, and may as well do it now. I know Rayner and like him, and don't believe he's the kind of man to wilfully wrong another. I don't know Mr. Hayne, and Mr. Hayne apparently don't want to know me. I think that where a man has been convicted of dishonorable—disgraceful conduct and is cut by his whole regiment it is our business to back the regiment, not the man. Now the question is, where shall we draw the line in this case? It's none of our funeral, as Blake says, but ordinarily it would be our duty to call upon this officer. Shall we do it, now that he is in Coventry, or shall we leave him to his own devices?"

"I'll answer for myself, Buxton," said Blake, "and you can do as you please. Except that one thing, and the not unusual frivolities of a youngster that occurred previous to this trial, I understand that his character has been above reproach. So far as I can learn, he is a far more reputable character than I am, and a better officer than most of us. Growl all you want to, comrades mind; 'it's a way we have in the army,' and I like it. So long as I include myself in these malodorous comparisons, you needn't swear. It is my conviction that the Riflers hadn't said so five years ago. It is my information that he has paid every cent of the damages, whether he caused them or not, and it is my intention to go and call upon Mr. Hayne as soon as he's settled. I don't propose to influence any man in his action; and excuse me, Buxton, I think you did."

The captain looked wrathful. Blake was an oddity of whom he rather stood in awe, for there was no mistaking the popularity and respect in which he was held in his own regiment. The —th was somewhat remarkable for being emphatically an "outspoken crowd," and for some years, thanks to a heaven of strong and truthful men in whom this trait was pronouced and sustained, it had grown to be the custom of all but a few of the officers to discuss openly and fully all matters of regimental policy and utterly to discountenance covert action of any kind. Blake was thoroughly popular and generally respected, despite [illegible] occasions. Nevertheless, there were signs of dissent as to the line of action he proposed, though it were only for his own guidance.

"And how do you suppose Rayner and the Riflers generally will regard your calling on their black sheep?" asked Buxton, after a pause.

"I don't know," said Blake, more seriously, and with a tone of concern. "I like Rayner, and have found most of those fellows thorough gentlemen and good friends. This will test the question thoroughly. I believe most of them, except, of course, Rayner, would do the same were they in my place. At all events, I mean to see."

"What are you going to do, Gregg?" asked "the mole," wheeling suddenly on his brother troop commander.

"I don't know," said Gregg, doubtfully. "I think I'll ask the colonel."

"What do you suppose he means to do?"

"I don't know again; but I'll bet we all know as soon as he makes up his mind; and he is making up his mind now—or he's made it up, for there goes Mr. Hayne, and here comes the orderly. Something's up already."

Every head was turned to the doorway as the orderly's step was heard in the outer hall, and every voice stilled to hear the message, it was so unusual for the commanding officer to send for one of his subordinates after the morning meeting. The soldier tapped at the panel, and at the prompt "Come in" pushed it partly open and stood with one white gloved hand resting on the knob, the other raised to his cap visor in salute.

"Lieut. Blake?" he asked, as he glanced round.

"What is it?" asked Blake, stepping quickly from the window.

"The commanding officer's compliments, sir, and could he see the lieutenant one minute before the court meets?"

"Coming at once," said Blake, as he pushed his way through the chairs, and the orderly faced about and disappeared.

"I'll bet it's about Hayne," was the apparently unanimous sentiment as the cavalry party broke up and scattered for the morning's duties. Some waited purposely to hear.

The adjutant alone stood in the colonel's presence as Blake knocked and entered. All others had gone. There was a moment's hesitation, and the colonel paused and looked his man over before he spoke.

"You will excuse my sending for you, Mr. Blake, when I tell you that it is a matter that has to be decided at once. In this case you will consider, too, that I want you to say yes or no exactly as you would to a comrade of your own grade. If you were asked to meet Mr. Hayne at any other house in the garrison than mine, would you desire to accept? You are aware of all the circumstances, the adjutant tells me."

"I am, sir, and have just announced my intention of calling upon him."

"Then will you dine with us this evening to meet Mr. Hayne?"

"I will do so with pleasure, sir."

It could hardly have been an hour afterwards when Mrs. Rayner entered the library in her cosy home and found Miss Travers entertaining herself with a book.

"Have you written to Miss Van Antwerp this morning?" she asked. "I thought that was what you came here for."

"I did mean to, but Mrs. Waldron has been here, and I was interrupted."

"It is fully fifteen minutes since she left, Nellie. You might have written two or three pages already; and you know that all manner of visitors will be coming in by soon."

"I was just thinking over something she told me. I'll write presently."

"Mrs. Waldron is a woman who talks about everything and everybody. I advise you to listen to her no more than you can help. What was it she told you?"

Miss Travers smiled roguishly; "Why should you want to know, Kate, if you disapprove of her revelations?"

"Oh," with visible annoyance, "it is to—I wanted to know so as to let you see that it was something unfounded, as usual."

"She said she had just been told that the colonel was going to give a dinner party this evening to Mr. Hayne."

"What?"

"She—said—she—had—just—been—told—that—the—colonel—was—going—to give—a dinner party—this evening—to Mr.—Hayne."

"Who told her?"

"Kate, I didn't ask."

"Who are invited? None of ours?"

"Kate, I don't know."

"Where did she say she had heard it?"

"She didn't say."

Mrs. Rayner paused one moment, irresolute: "Didn't she tell you anything more about it?"

"Nothing, sister mine. Why should you feel such an interest in what Mrs. Waldron says, if she's such a gossip?"

And Miss Travers was evidently having hard work to keep from laughing outright.

"You had better write your letter," said her big sister, and flounced suddenly out of the room and up the stairs.

A moment later she was at the parlor door with a wrap thrown over her shoulders. "If Capt. Rayner comes in, tell him I want particularly to see him before he goes out again."

"Where are you going, Kate?"

"Oh, just over to Mrs. Waldron's a moment."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN CLUB.

JACK GIVES HIS IDEAS ON POLITICIAN MAKERS

And Some Good Advice as Ruling. He Also Gets Up a Little Practical Joke at the Expense of a Bully—The Way it Terminated, Etc., Etc.

At this time an election was pending, the member representing the Rocky Mountains at Ottawa having recently died. Party feeling ran high, and every one had strong views on the political issues of the day. It happened that the Blacksmith, a very big politician, had come up to the shanty "to take a rise out of Jack," and had just been talking scornfully about aristocrats such as he supposed Jack to be.

"Are you going to vote?" said Jack.

"Vote, yes. What d'ye take me for, eh?"

"Going to help to direct the course of government with your vote?"

"And why not? confound you"—

"And to influence the votes of others?"

"What d'ye mean?"

"That it's pretty rough on the country."

"Youngster, you're getting too fresh, you shut your mouth or I'll—"

"Sit down and play with your tail, and let me tell you some more. You're going to help govern the country, but you can't govern yourself. I saw you directing yourself home last night and secession was nothing to it. One leg was trying to go up hill and the other was trying to climb down; your body was making for home, and your head was on the way to a saloon; your head was going round at about eighty revolutions a minute; and as to your stomach I'll bet you a dollar, although I haven't got it, that if you swallowed anything but whiskey it would be like filling a red hot boiler with cold water—you daren't do it. You'd blow up like a Mississippi steamboat.

"Well, if that's the kink of governing you want for Canada I wish her joy of the prescription. Your policy in cold daylight appears to be too tortuous, and although it is imposing not to say magnificent, its too sumptuous for every day use."

"Don't you vote, Jack?" said the Wiper.

"Not when I drink."

The boys were all laughing at the Blacksmith, and he trying to take it all as a joke when Jack, who had been warned of the man's intentions, signalled to me to carry out the plot we had arranged beforehand. It was the old time, honored device of the garter snake. I had two ready in a pickle bottle and now drew the cork. While the snakes were gradually getting warmed into life and activity before the fire, the victim was entertained by Jack, and the crowd informed cautiously as to our intentions.

"Boys, I never vote, because if Gladstone and Disraeli couldn't govern a country, how shall I know. You fellows are all full of fine sentiments about liberty such as they have in the United States. In that happy country everyone is free. You Dick" (to the Gambler) "did a fine business at cards; you Steinwitz" (to the German Policeman) "found horse stealing pays in Montana; you," (to Ante up Mike) "have spent a long and illustrious life killing whites and Indians impartially with stuff you always describe as whiskey you," (to the Imitation Cowboy). "tell us you have shot down lots of men over in the States because they wouldn't drink with you—death before degradation, eh Jim—you, Judge," (the Judge was once a capitalist in New England,) "often tell us how nice and easy it is for financiers to rope in the public, and have a good time generally over there; and you, Mr. Politician," (to the unfortunate Blacksmith) "have opened our ignorant eyes to depths of infamy in American electioneering and legislature such as we never imagined before."

Here there was a general tendency to jump on Jack, and Lost Creek Jim went over to Jack and stood alongside of him, as did also the Secretary in fear and trembling. Jack saw the whole thing, and went on blandly with his little speech.

"When I look at the New York Police Gazette and other journals circulated among intending criminals; when I see the refining influence of pugilism and crime novels, when I remember that from your own personal experiences, gentlemen, how safe and easy it is in the States to cheat at cards, to steal horses, to murder acquaintances when they won't drink, to rob stages, to poison wholesale with whiskey, to rob widows and orphans by financing, to elect political candidates representing the whole criminal community, to bribe juries, to defy justice, all with complete immunity, I look with reverence to the Land of Liberty—that glorious democracy and criminocracy, called the United States! Oh land of trusts and boodle, oh paradise of railroad swindlers, and United States senators, and bar-room candidates! Oh land of the Police Gazette and the variety theatre! glorious example of liberty! Outcome of the polity of the ages—

"Snakes! Look there! Kill it boys, for heaven's sake! There before the hearth, two of them! There, coming this way. Look!"

Jack paused in his oration, looked all over the floor and with cold politeness asked the Blacksmith if he'd taken some water by mistake—

"Do you see anything, Tom?"

"He must be dreaming."

"What! don't you see them boys?"

Jack's offensive remarks were forgotten. All eagerly assured the Blacksmith that there wasn't a snake out yet this spring. One of the snakes actually began crawling up his leg, when he seized it by the tail and hurled it into the hearth. Then with a howl of despair he began stamping desperately to fry and kill the other snake, but it slipped away.

"Oh, God! I've got the horrors! Let me out of this and I'll quit drinking as long as I live. Let me away! let me away!"

As the door slammed behind the unfortunate politician, Jack looked all round the crowd so menacing a minute before and blandly remarked:

"That's self-government."

BLAINE AND HIS CONVERTS.

The reception of BLAINE's reciprocity utterances by the Boards of Trade, and the press generally throughout the United States, demonstrates as clearly as it is possible for anything to be demonstrated that the "infant industry" fad is about played out, and that protectionists in Congress in passing the MCKINLEY bill will do so at their peril. But this is not so very surprising after all. BLAINE as a reciprocitylst might cause us to raise our eyes, but not so with the Republican party. In the ranks of the Republicans there has always been a strong predilection for free trade, or at least a modified form of it. The Democrats howled free trade because their leaders told them to do so, but with the Republicans free trade was the result of pure conviction. But the trouble with the Republicans was, they prefered protection to affiliating with the democracy, a party which they both detested and distrusted. As it was, mugwumpry throve, but the dyed in the wool Republicans, strong as may have been their free trade propensities, or to put it in another way, dubiously as they accepted the doctrine of protection, chose to abide by it rather than accept the reign of "Rebel Brigadiers." Democratic rule was not to be thought of for a moment. There was a menace in the "Solid South," and it solidified the Republicans, at the expense, in a large proportion of instances, of their convictions. We may safely reckon that had free trade, or reciprocity emanated from any other source than the democracy, it would have been accepted by the Republicans and today have been in full operation. But the fallacy of protection has become too palpable to be endured on the score of free trade being a Democratic war cry.—If the Democratic tiger is still dangerous protection is not less so. As well be torn in pieces by the former as to be crushed to death by the latter. And so it comes about that BLAINE finds himself endorsed by a respectable following. The promised relief coming from a Republican of the stalwart sort, free trade Republicans no longer hesitate to proclaim how they stand. Reciprocity expressed by one of their own party, the expediency of adopting it can no longer be questioned. In San Francisco we find BLAINE endorsed by the Chamber of Commerce irrespective of party, and it has been plainly intimated to California's representatives at Washington that it is expected of them to support the new departure. Furthermore later advices are to the effect that the President has assented to BLAINE's views, in so far that he will recommend ALDRICH's amendment to the MCKINLEY bill which vests the President with discretionary power to suspend operations of customs duties whenever he shall deem it wise to do so, or when other countries shall offer to reciprocate.

Such is the situation now at Washington. The President, BLAINE, WANNEMAKER and others make too strong a team for the protectionists in congress to successfully contend against. The MCKINLEY bill will pass and tacked to it will be ALDRICH's reciprocity amendment. The question which next presents itself is, what are Canadian national policyists going to do about it? Will they responsive to their insane notion that protection is the correct thing give the tariff another boost or will they make the most of what practically amounts to an invitation to reciprocate? We cannot expect much from the present administration. Bearing in mind their subjection to manufacturing interests, the thickness of their skins and the cast iron character of their prejudices, we may expect them to regard the invitation of the United States to reciprocate with cold indifference. But these men cannot forever reign. The constitutional limit for the duration of parliament will one day expire and the slaves of the manufacturing monopoly will have to plead their cause before the people. There can scarcely be a question as to the result. The electorate will not allow their eyes to be blinded by the dust of side issues. The United States is their natural market, and they doubtless will find men who fully appreciate this fact and who will honestly undertake the consumation of a policy which is inseparable from the best interests of the great mass of the people of Canada.

THE GOVERNMENT BLAMELESS.

Although the right to call out troops is vested in the magistrates, we are not to presume for a moment that they will exercise this prerogative without the assent of higher authority, where such authority is obtainable. In the case in question higher authority was obtainable. We are not to suppose for an instant that Victoria magistrates would issue a requisition for troops to operate outside of the city without the concurrence of high authority, such authority being available. The fact that it was required of the Victoria magistrates to issue a requisition for troops to operate in a district nearly a hundred miles away is conclusive that it was meant that the responsibility of the requisition should mainly rest with the Government. Why then does the Government seek to shirk the responsibility of the thing? Will the Government deny that they were not consulted in the case? Will the Government insist that the Victoria magistrates acted wholly on their own responsibility? We must beg to be excused being thought so soft as to accept the statement that they did not concur in the action of the magistrates. The course of the Government in all matters in which they have had reason to think public opinion would be divided, has always been one of duplicity. Judging the Government by their records, the assumption of their assent to the calling out of the troops is perfectly justified. The Government is probably familiar with the fate of the boy who cried "wolf" once too often. Can they who have been caught time and again in acts of deception expect to be treated as having departed from their usual course of hypocrisy? We do not urge that a blunder is worse than a crime, but we would have the Government to understand that they cannot expect us to swallow stories which are intrinsically improbable.

THE PROMOTION OF CAPT. KANE.

England has not forgotten the officers of the Calliope, who behaved so gallantly during the hurricane at Samoa. The captain is now in command of the Inflexible, one of the largest ironclads in the navy; the first lieutenant has since been made a commander, and the chief engineer has been advanced to the rank of staff engineer. The remaining officers have received appointments to important ships. The gunner's mate, who specially distinguished himself, will be promoted to gunner as soon as he qualifies. Nothing is said, however, about the common sailors, who did their duty well.

What would our commentator have the Government do for the common sailors of the Calliope? Far be it from us to offer any remarks in disparagement of Her Majesty's soldiers and sailors, but we cannot help thinking that there seems to be a tendency to attach excessive importance to the performance of what is nothing more than mere duty.

It was a fine stroke of seamanship the getting of the Calliope out of her dangerous position in the harbor of Apia in the height of a gale of unexampled violence, but was it any more than a duty, was it any more than what might have been expected of British seamen? Everything considered, unless Captain KANE has a record aside from his Samoan experience, his promotion is altogether disproportionate to the services rendered. "England expects every man to do his duty." It will have been noted, perhaps, that the American naval authorities have thus far refrained from investigating the Samoan disaster. The alleged cause of the failure to do so is that it must inevitably require that Admiral KIMBERLEY be censured for not sending his ships to sea when it became apparent that a heavy gale was impending. If this be the case is not Captain KANE as culpable as KIMBERLEY. Does he not indeed owe his escape from the fate that overtook the American and German ships to good luck? As we have just said we would not underrate the value of such men as Captain KANE nor yet of his subordinates. Skill they undoubtedly possess, having everything in fact that is needful to keep up the reputation of the British navy. But he had no alternative but to put to sea or be wrecked. He chose the former course; his engines were powerful enough to enable the ship to storm wind and tide; he escaped. But what about Jack? Is he not entitled to recognition for his services? Most assuredly he is if his superiors are. To his ability to carry out the orders of his superiors the country is much indebted. Promotion as we understand it is the reward of more than duty, of heroism, of the performance of more than what duty actually requires. The tars of the Calliope should be remembered along with their superiors, but we shall always think that with respect to the escape of the Calliope the British Government might well erect a monument to Steam and Iron.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. PLANTA indignantly denies the rumor, circulated in this city, that he suggested the idea of calling out the militia. He informed our special correspondent that he was not in any way responsible for an act which most people denounce as an inexcusable piece of folly.

We were informed, on apparently good authority, that an official high in authority in the Province, had telegraphed instructions to Wellington to arrest two of the leaders of the strikers should they take part in the procession. Enquiry at Wellington failed to corroborate the report, which, it must be admitted, appeared too ridiculous to be generally credited. Although the militia have been called out, we are still under civil law.

GOLDWIN SMITH is probably a reader of the New Westminster Truth and the Vancouver World, and had those two journals before him when writing about the impersonality of journalism, he said: "Its obvious tendency (that is tendency of personal attack by one editor on another) is to degrade the press by driving from its service every man who has a character to be assailed and who shrinks from snatching it in blackguard brawls. It was indeed for this very purpose that recourse was had to the practice by the press tyrant to whom its extension in Canadian journalism is largely due. It may be, as some contend, that anonymous journalism is a bad system and that signed articles would be better. That is a tenable view. But if anonymous journalism is to continue, the law of impersonality must be upheld. Why cannot journalism like other intellectual callings be a regular profession and have its code of honor, with the means of enforcing the law against delinquents? Why is it that one journal should so often be seen dealing foul blows at another, and that the people should have to look on while their reputed instructors and guides roll together in the mud and gouge each other like Texan rowdies?"

If a nineteenth century woman in the exercise of her tongue proclaims herself a survival of the eighteenth century to the extent of being a nuisance to her neighbors, and there being no nineteenth century law to meet her case, what should be done in the matter? Back in Ontario a woman has been complained of as a common scold. Nineteenth century jurisprudence does not take cognizance of this species of lingual transgression. Eighteenth century jurisprudence does, however, and that in the shape of the "ducking stool." But the magistrate before whom the woman was brought declined to inflict what we should suppose to be a harmless but efficacious penalty, and so sent her case up to a higher court. Nineteenth century ingenuity has successfully provided for many of the ills the flesh is heir to, but in respect to a scolding woman it seems to have lamentably failed. Has scolding fallen off that this omission has occurred, or is it that people have grown indifferent to feminine vituperativeness? We affect to dispise antiquated means of punishment for certain crimes against our comfort and peace of mind, but in the case of an incorrigible scold, we should say, that we might, without danger to our progressive instincts and sense of propriety, at least make use of a hose.

VICTORIA SEWERAGE COMPETITION.

TO THE EDITOR.—Kindly allow me to correct the errors contained in the sewerage committee's report to the council on Wednesday evening. For convenience and brevity I will reply to them in the same order as they appeared in your issue of last evening.

1. Mr. Hering complained of and condemned the plan proposed to be accepted because the sewage did not all go out to the straits by Clover Point, and also because the flatness of the fall would never allow it to get there, even when flushed. See his report.

2. K. M. H.'s plans were reported first in all the city newspapers as the result of the separate deliberations at the sewerage committee and the expert, Mr. Hering, and the TIMES (I think) congratulated the members of the sewerage committee on the fact that great minds run in the same channels, at which some of the members were, I believe, quite elated. I can, however, only go by the published reports, which I think the committee will agree are usually most carefully taken.

3. Whether I am acquainted with Shore ejectors or not, I will demonstrate further on, but one thing will not be out of place here, viz., if the sewage remains sealed hermetically from time of leaving the ejector to its delivery to the Clover Point outfall, and this under compression, I pity the poor taxpayers whose house drains communicate with this main sewer at any point between the ejectors or pumps and Clover Point. The sewerage committee say this is the fact vide their report. Mr. Hering says they are not economical, and the extra engines and men required are an endless source of expense.

In conclusion, it is stated that my estimate is higher. This is so, for K. M. H. sewers the whole city, and the proposed design sewers on streets outside these boundaries, viz.: Bay street, Cook street, and the shore line, omitting everything east of Cook street, the new public schools, and all streets north of Bay street. Therefore, the committee could not expect to pay as much for three-quarters of a thing as they would expect to pay for the whole.

In order that every citizen may form this statement, see Mr. Mohun's report (over his own signature) on page one.

A PROTEST.

Nanaimo Citizens Object to an Armed Force in Their District.

NANAIMO, Aug. 8.—A monster mass meeting of the business men and citizens will be held to-night to protest against the presence of the troops at Wellington.

FROM WELLINGTON.

All Quiet—Reported Action on the Part of the Mine Owners.

Special to the TIMES.]

WELLINGTON, 9 a. m., Aug. 8.—All continues quiet. Nothing has occurred to break the monotony of the proceedings here, and apparently nothing will occur. It is rumored that informations may be sworn out against a few of the union men who are said to have used insulting language to the working miners.

A current report is also afloat that an effort is to be made to stop the parades by legal process, but the miners say if this is done they shall quietly submit to the order and not attempt to resist. Their leaders have instructed them to do this, and there will be no trouble. Some of the men seem to think that the mine owners are anxious to get up some sort of a row so that an excuse for the presence of the troops may be had. Judge Harrison was here yesterday afternoon and closeted with the mine owners for quite a time, but the nature of their interview is unknown.

Swimming parties are in order among the soldiers, and many squads take trips down the mines.

The C Battery men consider the whole business a picnic.

2:30 p. m.—Procession as usual just started. Large Italian flag been added to banners previously carried. All quiet.

PIT COMMITTEES.

Manager Bryden Tells What He Knows About Them.

Special to the TIMES]

WELLINGTON, Aug. 8.—Your correspondent to-day interviewed Mr. Bryden, manager of the Wellington Collieries, regarding the present trouble and its causes. It has been and is understood that the whole trouble hinges on the fact that Mr. Bryden and the Dunsmuirs refuse to recognize the Miners' Union or the pit committee, and when your correspondent met Mr. Bryden the first question put was:

"Do you positively refuse to recognize the pit committees?"

"Yes, I do."

"On what grounds?" was asked.

"On these grounds," replied Mr. Bryden: "The committees are not always well chosen, and are not in most instances composed of the best and most sensible miners. A great objection, too, is that in the event of a dispute there are always three of the committee against two of our side. In case of a complaint against a boss, and I find that the boss is in the right, I always stand by him, as is my duty. There is then but two of us against the three of the committee."

"Have you ever found a pit committee when coming in contact with you anyway over-bearing or arbitrary," was asked.

"Well, no; for I have never worked at a mine where they were recognized, but I have got my information from managers of other mines, who state that the pit committees are liable to become arbitrary, and there is always a danger of injudicious committees."

"But they seem to work well at the Vancouver Coal Company's mines," said the interviewer.

"About that I can not say," replied Mr. Bryden, "but I have been told that in many parts of the States, the pit committees have been the cause of a great deal of trouble. I never heard of a pit committee in the old country. I have heard that in many mines in the States where the pit committees have been recognized and tolerated that they have become importunate and asked too much."

"Is it true," Mr. Bryden was asked, "that the scale of wages in your mines is so unequal that while some men are making $5 a day others are only making $2?"

"No, I know of no such cases. On on average the men make $3 per day of eight hours work. We have a different scale of wages for different classes of work ranging from 75 cents to 90 cents and $1."

"Is there not a plan called "cabling," or drawing lots for the best places, in force in some mines, and could it not be done here?" was the next query.

"No, this could not be done in these mines, for in many cases the roof is very tender and requires good timbering. We have many good miners who are not good timberers, and the men have to be selected to fill the places. It would not do to trust to luck as the mine must be kept safe."

"Could not the pit committee settle many differences?"

"If we recognized them," said Mr. Bryden, "they would soon go so far as to dictate as to who should and who should not be employed in the mines. This is objected to by us, as we will not allow others to dictate as to who should run the mines. There are many of the miners who also object strongly to pit committees. I had much rather deal direct with the complainant in cases of difficulty, and the power will not be delegated to a pit committee. If any manager did so, I should say he was not a fit manager for a mine, and did not work in the interests of the mine owners."

"Would you refuse employment to a society man if he was a good workman?" was asked.

"No, so long as no interference was made with the work we should have no objection to union men. If the society is one to aid the men and for their mutual benefit, we would be ready to assist it. A strong objection would be made to any union men who tried to coerce non-union men to join them."

"If the demand made by the men on the 17th of May had been given in time for consideration, would it have been considered?"

"Certainly it would; though I can say nothing as to whether it would have been conceded or not. The whole action of the men was wrong. They gave notice of the demand on Saturday, May 17th, and on the 19th these men came to the pit-head to enforce their demands. A committee composed of men not of our own employ came down and we would not recognize them, but promised to receive a committee of our own men. On the 26th May a committee of our own men came to us and discussed the eight hours from bank to bank, and some other matters, but did not enquire into the matter for which they met. We are still ready to meet a deputation of our own men."

"About the trouble or row on Monday, Mr. Bryden, was it sufficient to cause alarm?"

"Yes, I think it was. The men were very excited, and not disposed to listen to reason. When the Belgians were warned off our property there was considerable trouble as they could not understand English, but when interpreted to them they went all right."

"What do you think of the parades which are going on now?"

"I consider that such demonstrations will keep back an amicable settlement, and it is impossible to tell when the matter will end.

A PECULIAR DECISION.

People Who do not Know the Bible May be Ridiculed.

C. Legault, a young Frenchman, was charged in the Montreal police court lately with disturbing the meeting of the French branch of the Salvation Army. Captain Roche, a French-Canadian S. A. cadet, and one Drolet, a compatriot, appeared against Legault. They were subjected to an elementary examination in theology, and their answers exposed most astonishing ignorance. They did not know who wrote the Bible, where it was written, the nationality of John the Baptist, or the difference between the Old and New Testaments. These surprising answers convulsed the auditors who appeared largely to regard the Salvationists with contemptuous hatred. The length to which the questioning was carried caused a member of the bar present to speak with considerable warmth. He thought that the attempt apparently to humiliate the Salvationists was contrary to the spirit of British fair play. The defence was made by two witnesses, one a youth whose appearance and manner were by no means calculated to inspire respect. He glibly asserted that he and others went to the meetings for fun, and that the officers preaching were ridiculous and that they talked like fools. A middle aged voluble female gave similar testimony. The Recorder, in summing up, said: "I have many times had the Salvation Army come before me for protection both as a corps and individually, and I have defended them against ill treatment, but in this case, both by evidence of the prosecution and of the defence, their preaching must have been ridiculous, as they do not know the most simple things about the Christian religion. It is not wonderful that the people should laugh. Under these circumstances I cannot condemn, and the case is dismissed."

A PUBLIC SCOLD.

An Alleged Counterpart of Shakespear's Shrew.

A living illustration of Shakespeare's shrew was arraigned at the Toronto Police Court lately, if the stories of the witnesses are to be believed. The woman is Mrs. Annie Pope of 40 Price street, and her neighbors charge her with being a common scold. The charge is laid under an old act, and reads as follows:

For being a common and tubulent brawler and sower of discord among her quiet and honest neighbors, so that she has become a public nuisance to her neighborhood by her scolding, quarreling, inciting strifes, controversies, quarrels and disputes among Her Majesty's liege people, against the peace of Our Lady the Queen, her Crown and dignity, to the common nuisance of divers of Her Majesty's liege subjects.

About a dozen of the woman's neighbors, including Mrs. Jane E. Hutt, Mrs. E. Tench, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Annie Lawrence, Mrs. George W. Ensminger, Mrs. Catharine Manning, Messrs. Tench, Garnett and Ensminger, testified that from early dawn to dusk she was continually abusing them, making disagreeable remarks anent new dresses or hats which the ladies purchased and making herself a nuisance generally. Among the choice expletives which she was continually discharging like chewed paper from a boy's pop gun, one missile propelling another, were these, "You're a born devil," "a red-headed sinner," "a dirty liar," "I'll smash you with a block," "I'll break your neck," "If you didn't drink so much beer, you would have more money to go to bargain day."

The evidence was very strong and the Magistrate committed the woman for trial. She was released on bail, her husband furnishing the necessary security.

The punishment for the offence is the treatment of the ducking stool so popular in the seventeenth and eighteen centuries.

A NEW PLAGUE.

TO THE EDITOR:—If the editor of the Colonist had taken the trouble to inform himself before publishing the nonsense he did in this morning's issue under the above heading, he would have discovered that the "inch" or "surveyor" worm as he calls it is indigenous to this country, and makes its appearance every year in greater or less numbers. This year it has appeared in greater numbers than usual.

VICTORIAN.

Victoria, Aug. 8, 1890.

THE ATHLETE ASSOCIATION BUILDING.

TO THE EDITOR:—The report of the meeting of the city aldermen shows that Mr. A. B. Gray asks that body to become parties to the action restraining by injunction the further construction of the building; also that the attorney-general of the province now demands of the city council that the building be removed. The full text of the first application of the club relative to their building, to the city council, also of that body's reply thereto, has appeared in the papers. The contention of our city fathers is understood to be that they gave no privileges to the club, but this view is not entertained by the members of the athletic association, who wrote to the mayor and council advising them of the injunction having been served restraining their building at the instance of Mr. A. B. Gray, on behalf of himself and of other citizens. The club asked the city council what course the latter would adopt under the circumstances, and they further stated that the amount up to the present expended on the building was $1,400.

It is apparent from a knowledge of what has transpired that the city council neglected to protect citizen's interests when they were notified by the club that they were about to obstruct the foreshore of Menzies street, and that they tacitly by their evasive reply, worthy of an ancient oracle, to the club's request for special privileges, gave the latter to understand they had the city's assent to, and approval of the proposed building. The city council cannot with a due sense of justice now refuse to re-emburse the club for the outlay entailed by the plainly implied, if not definitely stated, permission to put up the building. The circumstance that the city council took no steps to stop the erection of the structure is further evidence of their assent to the structure.

The good-natured non-action of our city fathers has placed them in a compromising position, and placed the club at a pecuniary disadvantage, which although a small affair to the city, is yet a serious matter to the Victoria youth.

It is to be hoped that the city council will see its way clear to re-emburse the outlay of the James Bay Athletic Association.

BEHRING SEA CONTROVERSY.

Some Interesting Letters of Blaine and Pauncefote Not Heretofore Published.

Anaconda Standard.]

To BLAINE: Lord Salisbury instructs me to inform the President that the seizure of British vessels in the Behring Sea must be stopped forthwith or he will know the reason why.
PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The President is surprised at the attitude of Lord Salisbury who, no longer ago than summer before last, came to an agreement with Minister Phelps that the subjects of each nation should fish or cut bait in their own waters. The President insists that British sealers have no business in Behring Sea, and would request that Her Majesty's Government should direct its subjects to make themselves scarce in its vicinity during the pending of further negotiations. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: Lord Salisbury regrets that he cannot comply with the extraordinary request of the President, and also desires to inform him that he wouldn't if he could. His lordship would notify the President that a British citizen, with or without a fishpole, has as good a right on the high seas as the next man, and he begs the President not to forget it. PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The President would present his compliments to Lord Salisbury and tender the information that seals are not caught, as his lordship erroneously surmises, with a fishpole and an angle worm. The President regrets that his lordship's lamentable ignorance has led him to misapprehend the entire substance of the controversy. His lordship never having seen a seal outside of a menagerie and never having caught anything of greater magnitude than a sucker, the President would urgently solicit his lordship to come off. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: Lord Salisbury directs me to notify the President that, never having caught anything of greater magnitude than the President of the United States, it pleases his lordship to acknowledge that the President's statement that his lordship's fishing experiences are limited to catching suckers is entirely correct. PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The President requests Lord Salisbury to apologize for his last communication, and avoid serious trouble to himself and all Her Majesty's possessions. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: It pains me to notify you that his lordship directs me to instruct the President to go to the devil. Assuming that it is your desire as well as mine to avert if possible the calamity of war between these two great nations may I suggest that a conference between the President, yourself and myself might result in a solution of the difficulty which would be at once honorable and satisfactory to both nations. If I may be allowed to go so far, I would respectfully recommend a private room at the Shoreham; and as there is a possibility that the conference may last rather late in the night, I trust you will pardon me if I take the precaution to bring a pack of cards. Might I also suggest that the presence of a fourth gentleman would undoubtedly add much to the interest of the occasion. It would gratify me exceedingly to meet the distinguished senator from Pennsylvania, who, I am credibly informed, is an expert in all that appertains to poker; or any other statesman whom you may desire to attend.
PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The President regards your suggestion with favor, and would recommend Thursday evening as the time for the conference. With your kind permission, instead of the distinguished senator from Pennsylvania, who I am led to believe, would do us all up within a deplorably short space of time, I will take the liberty of inviting the venerable senator from Massachusetts, who, I assure you, will prove a pudding. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: All O. K.
PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The day for the conference having arrived, the President regrets exceedingly that he will be confined to the white house this evening by the temporary illness of baby McKee, the child having fallen down stairs and sustained a severe bump upon the nose. The President would suggest a postponement until Saturday evening. BLAINE.

The Shoreham, Midnight, Saturday.
TO THE PRESIDENT, BRITISH MINISTER, THE SECRETARY OF STATE, AND THE SENATOR FROM MASSACHUSETTS: The head bartender requests me to inform you that in consequence of your liberal orders this evening, we regret to find ourselves all out of Pommery Sec, and I trust you will pardon the present substitution of Mumm. May I also be so bold as to request that you lower your voices a trifle, as I fear the house is now in danger of being pulled.
MORTON.

To BLAINE: Agreeably to the terms of our conference, I wired Lord Salisbury that the President offered to recall his reflections upon his lordship's ability as a fisherman if his lordship would withdraw his characterization of the President as a sucker. His lordship in reply expresses his willingness to withdraw the obnoxious expression, provided the President, withdraw all the United States cruisers from the Behring Sea and guarantee immunity to British sealers in future.
PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The President cannot assent to the extraordinary proposition of Lord Salisbury. If there is not an unconditional withdrawal of the term "sucker" the United States will prepare for immediate action. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: Lord Salisbury instructs me to notify you that the sucker still stands. PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: Please notify Lord Salisbury that he is a hobo, a son of a sea cook, a chump and a cuss.

To BLAINE: His Lordship instructs me to say "rats." PAUNCEFOTE.

To PAUNCEFOTE: The entire correspondence on the Behring Sea matter will now be submitted to Congress. The President regrets that war is inevitable. BLAINE.

To BLAINE: I trust the coming war will not disturb our relations as personal friends. Will you kindly loan me $500 till I draw my next quarter's salary? I am pained to discover that the venerable Senator from Massachusetts did me up so completely that I slightly overdrew my bank account.
PAUNCEFOTE.

A WAR OF EXTERMINATION.

Cruelty of the Russian Edicts Against the Jews—Wholesale Evictions.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Civilized Europe is shocked at the receipt of the full details of the Russian prosecution of the Jews. The Russian edicts are of the most cruel character. The first edict says: "No Jew is any longer permitted to own or lease farm lands." All Jewish land-owners, farmers and agricultural laborers are thus expelled from their village homes. Unless they have saved means enough for their sustenance they will be reduced to beggary. To intensify the severity of this edict the Government officials have included hundreds of small towns in the category of country villages, and expelled Jews from them by tens of thousands who will thus be rendered homeless. These laws, known as the May laws, were promulgated in 1882, but never enforced until now.

The second edict provides that all Jews, numbering many thousand families, settled outside the sixteen specified counties shall be expelled. An equally large number of the artisan class will be rendered homeless by the enforcement. The third edict withdraws permission for them to reside outside the sixteen counties. All Jews are precluded by the fourth edict from holding mining shares or connecting themselves in any way with the mining industry, and the fifth still further restricts their participating in the educational advantages. The Jewish scholars in the past were not allowed to exceed 5 per cent. among the students at the universities, and this proportion is now further reduced, the result being their wholesale expulsion from the higher institutions.

The sixth edict imposes upon the Jewish students another disability by closing the legal profession against them, while the seventh edict excludes them from the engineering, naval and medical professions and from all government offices.

The cruel part of these prohibitions is that an enormous proportion of the Jewish population are skilled agriculturalists, artisans and professional men, who were all adding largely to the wealth of the empire. All these will be ruined. It is estimated that nearly a million people will be expelled from their homes under these most tyrannical and reactionary new laws.

The consequent migration causes a congestion among the starving fugitives in the cities where the Jews are still allowed to dwell, is dangerous and may possibly result in pestilence. But only one object can be contemplated by the instigators of the persecution—namely, the total extermination of the 4,000,000 Jews in Russia.

The troubles which afflicted the Jews in Russia seven years ago arose from breaches of the law. A certain number of perpetrators were brought to justice and punished. In the present case the Government legalizes the persecution. The Jews have always been subject to exceptional laws, which, however, did not render their living impossible.

They in fact increased in numbers, wealth and intelligence; were industrious, thrifty, law-abiding and sober, and were successful as merchants, traders, artisans, and agriculturists. A few were permitted to enter universities and later became distinguished as lawyers, physicians and men of science.

All this is now changed. Such persecution involves a refinement of cruelty for which history furnishes no parallel. It is rumored that the victims of this Russian oppression will, as in 1882, break through the cordon of the Austrian and Prussian frontiers and find an asylum in free England, to the injury of its overstocked labor market.

AMERICAN NAVY SLANDERS.

Sailmaker Steals Because Others Did—Discipline of White Squadron.

VALLEJO, Aug. 6.—In accordance with orders previously issued by Secretary Tracy, a court-martial was convened at the United States navy yard at Mare Island yesterday, for the trial of sailmaker William Ridstone, United States Navy, on a charge of scandalous conduct. Ridstone, it is claimed, got together a lot of government property, securely packed it in two large boxes, addressed them to himself on tags to North Vallejo, and had one of the deckhands put the boxes on board the Monterey on the afternoon previous to her departure for San Francisco. Ridstone has since told his friends that others higher up in rank than himself have stolen from the government, and that if he is convicted and discharged from the service he will make it lively for others.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A story has just leaked out at the navy yard to the effect that while the white squadron was anchored at Rio Janeiro in June last Ensign Manning K. Eyres and Junior Lieutenant William E. E. Rush were subjected to court-martial for being on shore over night, and that for this both were sentenced to suspension from duty for two years. The reason for the heavy sentence, as given by a prominent officer, was that Rio Janeiro was at that time infested with yellow fever. The fever, as is well known, is an infectious disease, and much more likely to be contracted at night than by day, and for this reason the navy regulations provide very stringent rules in relation to shore leaves in infected ports, the order being that no member of the ship's company shall remain on shore after dark. Disobedience of this rule means likelihood of infection to the whole ship's crew.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 5.—The desertion of twenty-four British sailors yesterday was from the flagship Bellerophon. The men left in one of the vessel's boats while two steamers were landing visitors on the outside of the ship. They were discovered and the ship's cutter gave chase. The deserters were fired upon as they landed on Goat island. All but three were captured on the island and returned to the ship. One was struck by a cutlass while being arrested. Three who escaped are supposed to have swam across the harbor to the city. They have not been taken.

WASHINGTON CITY, Aug. 5.—Naval officers, especially engineers, are much pleased with the reports from San Francisco, giving the results of the preliminary trial of the new cruiser San Francisco, and are now more confident than ever that she will exceed contract requirements on her official trial, which will take place on the 10th and 11th inst. It is fully expected she will develop at least twenty knots, being one knot in excess of her contract, which, if made, will net her contractors $300,000 premium. Naval engineers are naturally anxious to see the record of nineteen and one-third knots made by the Philadelphia on her official trial beaten for the reason that the former is the first new cruiser having machinery designed by the bureau of engineering.

The latest fad of some of the fine ladies in England is to put their maids who wait at table in livery. The costume adopted is said to be a very "killing" one. But what will "Jeames" say to this? Are women going to attack every male stronghold?

The particular Mr. Bumble who has charge of the workhouse at Guilford, England, is a man of discernment. He is quite sure that a pauper's letters should not bear the prefix Mr. or Mrs.; and so when a missive would come so addressed he made it his business to erase the offending title. The unreasonable paupers, however, complained to the guardians, and Mr. Bumble was admonished that it was not his duty to correct the addresses on letters, no matter how preposterous they might be.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

PAUL CONTURE, M. P.

A Politician Who is a Farmer and Butter Maker--Danish Butter.

Mr. Paul Conture, M. P. for Chicoutimi and Saguenay, Que., arrived last night and is registered at the Clarence. Mr. Conture is a Liberal in politics. Chicoutimi is situated almost at the extreme east of the Province of Quebec on the shores of the River and Gulf of St. Lawrence. It is chiefly an agricultural district of medium sized or small farms well cultivated. The winters are rather cold and long to make cattle raising a profitable industry, consequently the attention of the people is turned to dairying, cheese making and the growing of fruit and vegetables. Mr. Conture is a resident of the parish of Notre Dame Laterriere, of the county, and owns a large farm and creamery. He visited Denmark a few years ago, studying the dairy system in that country. On his return he adopted it in his factory with admirable results. The cream is separated by centrifugal force. The cows were milked about 4 o'clock in the morning and an hour later the milk was delivered at the factory. It was there run into round vats or tubs, which revolved at a high rate of speed. The cream being lighter, was by the motion separated from the milk and drawn off by an automatic process. The milk, minus the cream, was returned to the farmer and he took it home for use. The cream was then kept about 24 hours to acidulate before being manufactured into butter. Such a process made a very good quality of butter, which would keep fresh a long time, and command from three to five cents per pound more on the Montreal market than that made by the farmers themselves.

Mr. Conture is looking at our Province to learn from personal observation how the country is adopted for farming with a view of recommending the young people of his native county to emigrate hither instead of going to the United States. He will remain in the Province only a few days, and will then return east.

More Light.

An employee of the corporation was engaged this morning in cutting down the large maple trees that have flourished so well around the city hall. It seemed a shame that the trees should be cut, but they had grown so large that the light was almost completely cut off from the clerk's office and the course was made necessary.

One Feature.

One of the features of trouble at Wellington was noticeble in the fact that representatives of business houses in Victoria were told by the Nanaimo merchants that orders must not be expected after the insult offered to the Wellington district by the sending up of troops. Fortunately the good sense of the Black Diamond merchants will distinguish who are the real parties to the difficulty, but even then the feeling is there.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

One of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, from New Westminster, is canvassing the city to-day for contributions in aid of a refuge home which will shortly be opened in that city under the auspices of that order. There are now ten Sisters of the Good Shepherd, most of them recently arrived from Ottawa, in New Westminster, actively engaged in the good cause. The people of Victoria are responding liberally to the request of the Sister for assistance.

The Thistle Cases.

About twenty-seven men of all classes and professions appeared in the police court this morning to answer to the charge of allowing thistles to grow on their property. Some pleaded guilty, others not guilty, and some ignorance, but they were all dealt with alike and fined $2 and $2 costs. D. R. Harris, one of the defendants, informed the court that the city allowed thistles to grow on the streets, and if they did not cut them it was hardly worth while making property owners cut theirs. A police officer also said he had noticed a number of thistles growing on the streets. This is not as it should be, and if the city intends to fine people for allowing thistles to grow they ought to look out for their own property.

I. O. G. T.

Last evening Bro. R. J. Plummer, Lodge Deputy, installed the following officers at Esquimalt: Triumph Lodge No. 16. C. T., Sis. Jenkins; V. T., Bro. Johnson; S. T. T., Sis. Berry; Sec., Bro. Stephens; A. S., Bro. Clayhards; F. S., Bro. Merryman; T., Sis. Muir; Chap., Sis. Berry; M., Bro. Bryant; D. M., Sis. Jaques; G., Bro. Presshall; S., Bro. Cutting; P. C. T., Bro. Causway. Sisters Berry and Jenkins were elected Grand Lodge representatives, and Bro. Dyer recommended as lodge deputy.

In Ocean Pearl Lodge of H. M. S. Amphion, the officers are: C. T., Bro. Burgoyne; V. T., Bro. Charlton; S., Bro. Rhymes; A. S., Bro. Turner; F. S. and Treas., Bro. McMillan; Chap., Bro. Hicks; M., Bro. Nevard; D. M., Bro. Collier; G., Bro. Carpenter; P. C. T., Bro. Seal. Bro. Brain was recommended as lodge deputy. Owing to the probable departure of H. M. S. Amphion before the session of the Grand Lodge, no delegates were elected.

An Abducted Child.

Considerable sensation was caused in Toronto lately by the circulation of a story that a child had been abducted from Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Moody, 227 Gloucester street, by the Sisters of St. Patrick's Orphans home. The statement made was to the effect that a child whom they had adopted some four years ago from the Home, and is now about seven years of age, had been sent out on a message and did not return. Later on Sister Martha called and stated that she had resumed the care of the child and declined to give it up. Mr. and Mrs. Moody are very much grieved about the affair. Sister Martha was seen by a reporter when she said: "The facts are simply these: The child was adopted from the Home, but we latterly came to the conclusion that it was our duty to resume the care of the child and we therefore took it back till we have reason to believe otherwise. We were very sorry to have to do it, but it was for the best."

Vancouver Crematory.

Vancouver has decided on disposing of its garbage by cremation, and will purchase a crematory from the Dominion Sanitary and Crematory Company of Des Moines, Iowa, upon the terms offered in a letter received in May, that is the building and machinery are to be provided by the company at its own expense, and if the establishment works satisfactorily for a certain length of time, the city is to pay $6,000 for it. A site was selected on False creek, near the R. C. P. Mills, but on interviewing Mr. Browning, of the C. P. R., it was learned that the property was held for manufacturing purposes and was considered far too valuable for the purpose intended. Another site will have to be selected.

Crow's Bar Mining Co.

At a meeting of the directors of the Crow's Bar Mining Co., at Vancouver on Wednesday, the report of the surveyor of the mine was read and the formation of a ditch to bring down a supply of water was found to be practicable. The expenditure in preparing to work the ground it was estimated would not exceed $6,000. Mr. Hamilton was appointed to act as representative of the company on their property, and to negotiate for the acquiring of an additional extent of mining ground in the vicinity. The water will be brought from an height of about 3,000 feet above sea level and traverse about 18 miles of country through ditches and lakes with a final fall of about 2,000 feet through a ditch about twelve miles long of which nearly four has been already constructed.

Provincial Appointments.

The following appointments are gazetted this week:

Lewis Jones Edwards, of Donald, a notary public for the county of Kootenay.

Joseph W. Burr, of Ashcroft, a deputy registrar of the County Court of Cariboo.

Charles A. R. Lambly, of Rock Creek, a notary public for the county of Yale.

Leonard Norris, of Okanagan, a collector of provincial revenue tax.

E. J. Offerhaus, of Spallumcheen, resident physician at Okanagan.

John J. Cambridge, deputy registrar of the County Court of New Westminster.

B. H. John, chief clerk; T. Kains, draughtsman; O. Fletcher, assistant draughtsman; T. E. Wooldridge clerk in the Lands and Works Department.

S. Phipps, clerk of records in the Lands and Works Department.

Cornelius Booth, J. P., to be gold commissioner for Cassiar district.

T. H. Giffin, Nelson, a deputy registrar of the County Court of Kootenay.

Interesting Event.

One of the interesting events in Paris last summer among the English and American residents was the production at the Theatre de L'Application of Richard Davey's play, "L'Heritage de Helene." "An exceedingly brilliant audience gathered to witness the play," says the Paris correspondent of the London Dramatic Review, "and it was an event of more than ordinary importance from the fact that it was the first time that English authors have ever attempted to produce a play in France in the French language. The drama must be pronounced a work of great merit. The plots and incidents are powerful and not unnatural, a combination always attained, and the authors are to be congratulated on their success."

Miss Granger, who was present at the Paris production of the play, afterward purchased it, and christened it "Inherited." She will produce it at the Victoria Theatre Monday night and Tuesday night she will be seen in "The Creole." Seats for the engagement are now on sale at Waitt's.

Gibbons-Coleman.

A very quiet wedding took place at St. John's church last evening, when Mr. C. H. Gibbons, city editor of the Colonist was united to Miss Agnes D. Coleman, second daughter of Mrs. G. Coleman of Fisguard street. The fact that the ceremony was to take place was kept very secret, but in spite of that a large number of people, principally of the fairer sex were present to witness it or perhaps more likely to see how the bride looked. The bride wore a dress of cream cashmere, trimmed with silk lace and white jessamine blossoms, the whole being surmounted by a tulle veil. Miss Georgina Coleman, sister of the bride who acted as bridesmaid, was dressed in a delicate pink. The groom was supported by his friend Mr. Rodk. Begg, and Mr. Benj. Evans gave the bride away. After the ceremony had been performed the party adjourned to the residence of the bride's mother, where a splendid wedding supper awaited them. The wedding presents were numerous and costly. Mr. and Mrs. Gibbons left by the Islander this morning on a trip to St. Catharines, Ont., the former home of Mr. Gibbons.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance, involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-eighths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

Well, That Depends.

It has paid us. On Saturday, the 5th instant, we advertised 20 per cent. off all Clothing. We have been rushing ever since, although some of our customers had to climb over a pile of rubbish about as high as a six-rail fence. If the streets were all full of rubbish it would be better for the town. It's a sign of progress.

OUR SALE STILL CONTINUES. We are bound to clean out our summer stocks. Better lose our profit than carry them over. We have piles of BOYS' SUITS left. We are not selling as many as we expected. Probably on account of the difficulty in getting to our store.

DIVISIONAL COURT.

Before Justices McCreight, Walkem and Drake.

Vancouver Waterworks Company vs. Vancouver City—This was an appeal from an order of the Chief Justice, made 5th August, refusing to grant an injunction restraining the city from proceeding under by-law No. 101, fixing the price to be offered to the company for their works at $211,000. For the company it was argued that they were embarassed by the passing of the by-law, the effect of which was uncertain, having regard to the confused condition of the clauses in the city incorporation and the company's acts, relating to the water works question. The Attorney-General and Mr. Richards, Q. C., appeared for the company. Mr. Hett, representing the city, was not called on to reply. The court held that the company were not injured by the by-law, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

Muirhead, W. Carter, W. Weisner.

The Dust.

A nice cool breeze is very pleasant on a warm day, but when that breeze is mixed with dust as it passes through the streets without caring who or what it runs against, it is generally put down as a nuisance. No doubt the city water sprinkler tries his best to keep the dust down, and he is pretty successful. But then his circuit extends hardly as far out as is necessary for the comfort of the citizens, and if the city would put on an extra wagon it would be gladly welcomed by all.

Must Respect Them.

Last evening the patrol from H. M. Navy marched three bluejackets up to the city lockup and asked a police officer that was there to give them a lecture for crowding ladies off the streets. The officer warned the men that they must not interfere with citizens especially ladies on the streets. To this one of the bluejackets answered that since he had been in the city he had not seen nor heard of a lady, meaning no doubt, that there were no lords' wives in the city. The police officer, however, notified them that every woman was to be treated as ladies in this country and discharged the bluejackets with a warning.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

The New York World correspondent sends the following cablegram:

Lady Dunlo says that she received by cable two splendid offers from American variety managers, but could not accept because she is under three years' contract with Gus Harris. She appears in Dublin Monday night. Her husband's father wants him to take a trip to Africa, but rumor credits him with saying that now the court has decided the woman to be his wife, he proposes to live with her.

Inquiry by a select committee of the British House of Commons shows that the population of Scotland has not increased during the past half century. There has been a slight gain in the north-eastern counties, but in the Highlands the population has declined about seven per cent. In Ayrshire the population numbered 100,473 in 1831, while it had decreased to 76,000 in 1881. There has been no increase in Inverness-shire, and there has been a general decrease in the southern counties appears more marked than in the northern. There is room for double the population now inhabiting the country, but the landlords prefer deer and sheep to Highlanders as occupants of their estates.
